I then asked couple friends over this weekend and we installed the transducer directly into my couch and the result is 1000% better. The vibration seems more evenly distributed to the whole couch and much more dynamic. Why it was annoying with watching concerts with couch leg mount method When you hear a kick drum, the transducer vibrates the couch leg and you feel the sound but then you immediately feel the muted sound in your body simply because the mount is directly on the floor and it quickly cuts off because of my tile floor. So after a short while, watching a concert gets a bit tired and annoying. With movies it was better but could be much much better. After installed directly into the couch WOW, what a HUGE HUGE impact it made. The kick drum is more alive and dynamic and travels through the couch and your body in a much much much smoother way. You actually feel the different levels of sustain and volume with the low end sounds, even with the kick drum. The kick drum no longer cut off by the tile floor and works 1000% better with your sub. How did we install directly into the couch Simple really. We went to local hardware store and got some longer nuts and bolts, a piece of red wood board the strongest wood and some metal brackets. We drilled holes to mount the transducer onto the wood board and mounted this board to the frame of the sofa, using the metal brackets. And no, there are no rattling with these brackets. We used the tough long screws and screwed them into the sofa wood frames plenty of room in there. VERY IMPORTANT DO NOT mount the transducer side way. You want it vertically mounted, just like it was with the couch leg method. General why buttKicker good The vibration from this is very dynamic from soft to loud and everything in between. For example, an earthquake sound will produce strong vibration at first and then softer and softer as the sound goes away. So your couch does not just shake, it shakes in unison with the audio dynamically. <http://filippodelvita.com/demo/userfiles/floatcam-pro-fc12-manual.xml>

In other words, the vibration has volume and it is awesome. She even mentioned that I should install another one on our other love seat. Wow, that brought tears to my eyes Advice Do it RIGHT the first time, or dont do it at all. Get this and try it with the couch leg method you may love it and leave it. This is my first time owning one of these systems. The intended purpose of was for more immersive moviewatching and playing on a PS3. The kit was setup with a HDTV using the line out on the TV using a Yadapter to split between it and a 2.1 two satellites one sub speaker set. The rumble unit was setup under one of the four rear legs of a threeperson sofa. Watching live concert music on the Palladia channel really gives the feeling of being there. I started noticing that on regular TV programming one can hear muffled sound on most dialog as if the sofa was the speaker. This is a bit distracting, and an annoyance that could be addressed by sound proofing the furniture a bit. The bluray version of The Dark Knight has some loud low frequency passages that causes a loud metallic thump. At first I thought it was bouncing against the furniture or floor, so I took a couple of mouse pads as a quick fix test and put them in between the floor and another between the rumble platform and the sofa, but it did not fix the problem. I then watched Pirates of the Caribbean, again on bluray, fortunately not much of an issue here. Gaming on the PS3 was another issue. Playing Call of Duty 4 with the rumble kit really brings gaming to a whole new level. Unfortunately, once I went online, grabbed a sniper rifle and aimed at someone, every heart beat the game produces started causing the metallic thump. I had someone else play while I tried troubleshooting the problem and noticed it was coming from inside the rumble module as if it was bottoming out. A few days later a family member was playing Resistance 2 and the module was not working.

It had stopped working within an hour of playing, and was very hot to the touch. Once it cooled it worked again so it appears that it disables to prevent damage. Ultimately, I decided to return the unit. Really disappointing, I recently learned from reviews of the bigger brother 400 watts min, 1100 watts max unit also bottoms out; this one is 50 watts. I may still give it a cautious try. Please try again later. HLN 5.0 out of 5 stars Watching concerts got annoying after awhile UNTIL. Get this and try it with the couch leg method you may love it and leave it. Please try again later. Please try again later. Andrea Gallo 5.0 out of 5 stars The engineer who demonstrated it to me also informed that it was on sales via Amazon. I came back home to Italy still imagining how to get one. At my next trip to the US I logged onto Amazon few days before my arrival and ordered it. I had it ready waiting for me at the hotel when I checked in and I brought it back on my return flight. I found that the US customs and security officers opened and inspected it, but put everything back in perfect place and added in a nice message apologising. Now the product itself. It has been so easy to install it, just straight away. Being in Italy, I had to replace the power plug and the fuse, as mentioned in the instructions. It has worked immediately. And perfectly well. The manual explains that you may need to connect the wireless transmitter and receiver to each other, similar to pairing your BT headset to your mobile phone. But actually it has not been needed, the two parts of the kit connected immediately and automatically. It is brilliant. I have used the RCA subwoofer output signal. I have used the Yshape cable provided to connect in parallel both the subwoofer and the buttkicker transmitter. They both work perfectly in combination. Actually, the buttkicker works so well that being on the sofa I do not hear the subwoofer anymore. The buttkicker dominates the scene.

Given the brilliant effect of the buttkicker, I wish it were more present, activated more frequently. From the manual I have read that it is possible to connect it in parallel to the front speakers to the power cable instead of the RCA of the subwoofer and in this case the buttkicker electronics would apply a low frequency filter, which you can control from the remote. Maybe I will try this setting. Only one remark when I switched off the buttkicker with the subwoofer still on, the subwoofer bumped quite hardly. I guess I should switch the subwoofer off first. Second remark, if I switch the subwoofer on while keeping the buttkicker transmitter connected with the Y cable but not powered, the subwoofer is mute. I guess the input impedance of the buttkicker transmitter grounds the input to the subwoofer when its off. Apart from this minor remark, the buttkicker is amazing and my friends want to buy one as well. But the Italian dealer is much more expensive compared to buying in locally in the USA. They will have to wait for my next trip or pay the extra 130Euro to the local distributor I strongly recommend it to anybody who wants to add that extra wow effect to their home theater set up!!!! PS please note that importing one single electronic equipment below 400Euro is legal and does not incur in any custom payment. I had checked it directly at the airport before actually ordering it. Please try again later. Please try again later. JSC 5.0 out of 5 stars Even my small room 10 x 14 has a 5.1 with multichannel receivers. The.1 subwoofer is split to two different powered subwoofers on opposite ends of the room. Even that, this buttkicker under the couch sounds so exciting from all the reviews. So I bought and install one, as a complimentary device to the two existing subwoofers. Tried different movies and games and got different results. All good, some just down right perfect.

Case in point in PS3 GT5, making the car go on the edge of the road and you can actually feel the tires running over the bumps under you. This is an easy decision for the home theater enthusiasts. You are addicted to get that realism fix. The question is what size. Is this wireless mid size good enough, or go for the bigger powered ones. Please try again later. Please try again later. Philip Jasper Recel 5.0 out of 5 stars I did not even know this thing existed till I decided to build my Racing Sim Rig. Thats how I got to know this product. I was thinking about getting the Gamer version but decided on this one because I want it for my playseat for games, and on the couch for movies or music, I love the mobility since its WIRELESS. need I say more For the Gamer version, youll have to find a way to attach it, its not hard to find one but I cant be bothered by it. The BKA300 with the couch mounting bracket, all I have to do is place it under my playseat and enjoy what youve been missing. Its expensive but for the price, youre getting a kit. I highly recommend this product and the seller! Please try again later. Please try again later. F. Galiber 4.0 out of 5 stars My only minor complaint was that the Buttkicker elevates the sofa about an inch off of the floor, which is noticeably higher than adjacent sectional pieces. Fortunately, I can purchase additional rubber isolators from Buttkicker Direct and make everything the same height but limit the mobility of the sectional pieces. As expected, the Buttkicker experience is more realistic with Dolby 5.1 broadcasts and DVDs. Normal stereo broadcasts cause the Buttkicker to rumble for almost everything, so I usually turn it off. The IR remote and RF transmitter seem to work fine and I had no problems getting my Harmony universal remote to work with the Buttkicker. The Buttkicker certainly works as advertised and Im very happy with my purchase.

One day, I would like to see future home theater systems and Buttkickers be able to distinguish between types of soundsexplosions, punches, earthquakes, music, etc. That is my dream. Please try again later. Please try again later. kushik 5.0 out of 5 stars You have to make sure they are setup properly and in a good position for maximum effect. For the the little rubber foot didnt cut it. I attached the shaker directly to the chair and fine tuned the kick with the controller. Cranked the sound up so I didnt hear the sound of the buttkicker. All of a sudden a super loud grenade exploded and the chair shook like Thor himself hit it with his hammer. Scared me silly, I mean it really startled me enough to think i needed to rewatch every movie and play every game again. Its super cool, day to day use you will get use to it, but there are times when you forget its there, something happens youre not expecting and BOOM!!! You feel it like never before and its all worth it. Please try again later. Please try again later. Scott M. Bosco 5.0 out of 5 stars What a pleasure, and ease to connect and use. The now added remote saves time and is super convenient in fine tuning the unit no more getting up and sitting down to make adjustments. I really like the wider platform that is useful for accepting two legs of a sectional close together. I found this version also responds better to audio sources that are nonDolby Digital, like 2.0 Dolby Surround films and even some MONO sources.

Actions film are exciting, Scifi more explosive, and concerts become a live experience. Please try again later. Please try again later. Cliff D 4.0 out of 5 stars Installation was not difficult. You'll really appreciate this miniearthquake machine with any movie that has a TRex running around in it. It adds a lot to the scariness of the movie. I only turn it on for movies. I don't need my kids cartoons shaking the couch. I haven't perfected the installation yet.

For big shaking scenes, the unit itself will rattle more than the couch I'm reminded of the law saying that for every action there is an equal and opposite reaction. I'm thinking about ways to pin it down more. Also, the wireless transmitter added a lot of noise to 2.4GHz causing the WiFi in our house to work poorly. After removing the transmitter and just using normal cables, WiFi is better. Please try again later. Please try again later. Reviewer Name 4.0 out of 5 stars Occasionally have to repair the transmitter and amp, especially if you unplug it. Remote is nice but not very powerful my amp is behind my couch and the transmitter is up front by tv and it sometimes doesn't register pointing the remote directly at the amp works though. The amp makes no noise and cannot be heard in a silent room. This is a much better system than the ButtKicker Gamer which I got a couple years ago. This is a nice addition to a sub woofer but does not replace one. Works well with both movies and games. Please try again later. Please try again later. Mike in Dallas 5.0 out of 5 stars Well, now if you want to extend that dimension, the buttkicker is what you're looking for. Like other reviewers I tried out the customer service for Buttkicker, and they were very helpful and quick to respond. They really do take their customer service seriously. I feel like I bought a quality product at a great price from a great company that will honor any warranty issues I may have. The setup is pretty easy. Or read them online while you're waiting for the shipment to arrive which was extremely fast. The IR sensor on the RF transmitter that you plug into your main receiver could be a little better. But these are minor complaints that are completely forgotten when watching Return of the King, Band of Brothers, or playing Call of Duty 4. The experience goes from watching a movie to being on a ride. We've had family and friends come over asking for a buttkicking. Bottom line.

for the price there is no single item that you can add to your home theater that will make as dramatic of an impact as the buttkicker. Highly recommend! Please try again later. Reload to refresh your session. Buttkicker amplifiers feature a wider frequency response than your average subwoofer amplifier. The wider frequency response means your Tactile transducers will provide more punch down at very low 10Hz frequency which is where you want to be in a Home Theater environment. The BKA3004 features Preset EQ Functions for Movies, Music, Games, 5 way binding posts, detachable power cord, a wireless remote control and wireless transmitter and receiver. The BKA3004 Wireless Version eliminates the need to run an analog audio Subwoofer cable from a DVD or AV Receiver output to the Buttkicker amplifier. This facilitates a easier installation for instances where running the extra cable might be difficult. The BKA3004 can power 1,2 or 4 BKMini LFE Transducers, 1,2 or 4 BK44 midsize Advance Transducers, or 1 Full Size BKLFE. Note Wiring 3 Transducer in parallel creates a 1.33 Ohm load which is too low for this amplifier. Wiring 3 transducers in series creates a 12 Ohm Load which is too much for this amplifier. For safe operation the transducers should be wired to obtain a 4ohm or 8 Ohm load. Please see the BKA3004 Connection Diagrams for configuration of transducers. Have you lost your user manual.
